

Maybe Santa knows about the key under the flowerpot,
even though nobody is ever,
ever
supposed to mention the key under the flowerpot.

So how would he find out about that?

No. The twinkling lights on the tree will make enough light for Santa to see, tiptoeing past chairs without bumping his knee to leave a present or two or three and get a kiss from the dog (if it's a dog that licks) and take a cookie or two or three, and then leave.

And if you don't have a chimney,
what happens then?
