It was harvest time, and Mr. Renkins needed help picking his apples. George and his friend the man with the yellow hat were happy to lend a hand . . .

or foot! Mr. Renkins explained that they needed to collect every apple.

"I'm going to join the missus 'round back," he said. "Once you fill that cart, you can unload it into the washing trough."

Mr. Renkins took his cart full of apples to the barn and dumped them into the water. It must be their bath time, George thought.

George climbed up the branches, collected the shiny red apples in his friend's hat, and put them into the cart. What fun! High up in the tree, he saw Jumpy Squirrel picking apples, too.

George decided to help. He took Jumpy's apple and tossed it into the cart with the rest of Mr. Renkins's apples. But Jumpy wanted that apple for himself! He leaped in to take it back, and George tried to stop him.

A FROG'S LIFE

Many animals change body shapes over the course of their life cycles.
Frogs are one kind. Can you think of any others?

Here are the eight stages of a frog's life, out of order.
Number them one to four in the proper order.

Curious George helps the Renkinses with their harvest and discovers that making cider can be even more exciting than picking apples.
