Tiana's Ghost

Halloween night in New Orleans began with a rusty-orange sunset.

“That sun looks just like a big ol’ pumpkin,” Tiana said, standing in the doorway of her restaurant.

“It’s perfect for Halloween,” her friend Charlotte said, flouncing up in a Little Bo Peep costume. “And look—those little fluffy clouds look just like your beignets!”

Tiana scowled.

“Why the frown, sugar?” Charlotte asked. “Don’t you love Halloween?”

“I do!” Tiana said. “It’s just . . . there’s been some weird stuff going on today. You reminded me about it when you mentioned beignets.”

“Weird beignet stuff?” Charlotte asked, laughing. “Only you would have a pastry mystery on Halloween, Tiana.”

Tiana shook her head. "It's probably nothing. I made a special batch of them for my Halloween party tonight, and they've all gone missing!"

Charlotte smiled. "You know, they say the spirits walk the earth on Halloween. Maybe they're the ones causing this mischief!" she teased.

Tiana laughed. But she wondered if maybe Charlotte was right.

Tiana knew spirits were real. She had seen them during her adventure as a frog.

I sure hope it's not ghosts, she thought nervously.

Just then, something fluttered at the edge of her vision. But when she spun around, nothing was there!

“Did you see that?” Tiana said.

“See what?” Charlotte asked. “Tiana, honey, get your hat and let’s go. We have pumpkins to carve! Apples to bob for! A party to throw!”

Tiana smiled, shrugging off her nerves. “Okay, okay,” she said. “I’m ready.”

First Tiana and Charlotte went to the Halloween fest at the farmers' market to carve pumpkins. But just as Tiana was putting the finishing touches on their pumpkin, she saw something strange out of the corner of her eye.

"What was that?" Charlotte said, dropping their pumpkin. But it was already gone.

"You saw it, too?" Tiana asked.

"I saw something," Charlotte said. She looked a little spooked.

Next the friends went bobbing for apples. But as Tiana came up for air, she saw it again. Charlotte shrieked. She saw it, too!

The little wisp of white was gone as quickly as it had appeared. Tiana and Charlotte stared at each other.

“I’m pretty sure you’re being haunted, sweetie,” Charlotte told Tiana.

As Tiana and Charlotte walked back to the restaurant, Tiana kept peering over her shoulder. She couldn't shake the feeling that there was something following her . . . but it always disappeared before she could get a good look!

Tiana did her best to ignore the flutters as she settled into her restaurant kitchen. She needed to work on the finishing touches for her big Halloween party.

The first step was to replace those missing beignets.
